Impressioning

Jos Weyers
Impressioning Jos Weyers
How long can I stand in front of your server room without being questioned?

2 seconds?

one minute?

ten?

Two seconds, twice a day, for about a week?
H. Edward Tickel Jr. † March 2012

FBI’s go-to NDE guy in the late 70’s
THE #1 reference work

Impressioning by Oliver Diederichsen

http://www.tresoroeffnung.de/buch.php
Anmerkung:
Während die Schließpositionen mit dem Originalschlüssel verglichen, lässt sich erkennen, dass ein Teil der Bohrungen nicht schließungsrelevant sind. Dies dient dazu, den Schlüssel höherwertig aussehen zu lassen.
KJS tool by Jord Knaap
Thanks to:

Deviant Ollam
Barry Wels
Oliver Diederichsen
Jord Knaap

lock animations pictures from blackbag.nl excerpts from his book KJS tool Books
Impressioning by Oliver Diederichsen
Practical Lockpicking by Deviant Ollam
Keys to the Kingdom by Deviant
High Security Mechanical Locks by Graham Pulford
Locks, Safes, & Security by Marc Tobias

Videos Online
http://connect.waag.org/toool
http://deviating.net/lockpicking/videos

Other Informative Sites
http://toool.nl
http://blackbag.nl
https://tresoroeffnung.de/de/shop/buecher.html
http://deviating.net/lockpicking
http://lockpicking101.com
http://security.org
http://stormlockpicks.com

or just google me..
Breaking In New Sport, Dutch Sweat Small Stuff

By JOHN TAGLIABUE

AMSTERDAM — People of this free-spirited Dutch city, known for its legal prostitution and easy marijuana, have found another pastime that flirts with convention and the law: picking locks.

On a recent Wednesday evening, Jos Weyers sat hunched over a magnifying glass studying the contours of a key that was taking shape as he filed away at it. Across the table, Jos Meyer sat picking at a standard front-door lock with a set of tools that looked for all the world like a collection of slender dental instruments, painted black.

Mr. Weyers, 39, is among 100 or so members of a club in the Netherlands called Toed, for The Open Organization of Lockpickers, that is dedicated to picking locks for fun. The movement has been growing over the last five years.

The Open Organization of Lockpickers first attracted police attention, but now 100 members compete in Olympic-style contests.
Encore:

impressioning visually step-by-step Key after the KJS treatment cut to the 1-1-1-1-1 position
mark on position 2 (begin counting at shoulder) 12112 (after jiggle)
mark distorts reflection on position 2
again a mark on position 2
yet again position 2
different angle (the dark spot)
the key does turn, but only with force tiny mark on position 5
And a big crater-mark on position 2
same mark, different angle
again same mark
yet again ...
(can you tell, I like crater-marks?)
like, really like them
same key, cleaned up (code 15112)
AMSTERDAM — People of this free-spirited Dutch city, known for its legal prostitution and easy marijuana, have found another pastime that flirts with convention and the law: picking locks.

On a recent Wednesday evening, Jos Weyers sat hunched over a magnifying glass studying the contours of a key that was taking shape as he filed away at it. Across the table, Jos Meyer sat picking at a standard front-door lock with a set of tools that looked for all the world like a collection of slender dental instruments, painted black.

Mr. Weyers, 39, is among 100 or so members of a club in the Netherlands called Toold, for The Open Organization of Lockpickers, that is dedicated to picking locks for fun. The movement has been growing over the last five years.

The Open Organization of Lockpickers first attracted police attention, but now 100 members compete in Olympic-style contests.